Who can be a victim of domestic violence? Acts of domestic violence are defined in the relationship between the offender and the victim. A person protected by the Law on the Prevention of Domestic Violence is 18 years of age or older or who is a minor who has been emancipated and who has been subjected to domestic violence by the spouse, former spouse or any other person present or a former member of the household. Any person, irrespective of age, sex or physical/psychological situation, whose domestic violence has been exposed to one of the following actors: a person with whom the victim has a child in common Persona with which the victim expects the victim to be a child in common if one of the parties is pregnant. Person with whom the victim has had a dating relationship What remedies can I seek if I am a victim of domestic violence? You have the right to bring a civil action under the Law On The Prevention of Domestic Violence of 1991, P.L. p. 261 of 1991. Both complaints must be filed for your protection, as the civil claim is intended to protect you, and the criminal complaint is intended to punish the offender. What is a Temporary Restraining Order (TRO)? A victim of domestic violence has the right to apply for a temporary restraining order (TRO) together with a criminal complaint. A is an order issued by a judge who is convinced that there are sufficiently complex circumstances to justify the victim's inability to appear in person and that sufficient grounds for granting a temporary restraining order have been demonstrated. In order to protect the victim from the defendant, the judge may grant under a temporary restraining order that: the offender is prohibited from returning to the scene of domestic violence, as well as other places to be determined. Further acts of domestic violence are prohibited for the offender. The offender is prohibited from holding a firearm or weapons. It is forbidden for the offender to communicate personally or to contact the victim or the victim's relatives by telephone or in writing. This involves making or forcing someone else to do so on behalf of the offender. Offenders are obliged to pay temporary child support to the victim. The offender must reimburse the victim for any medical expenses incurred as a result of the injury suffered by the defendant. The victim has an exclusive residence. The victim is granted temporary custody of the children. How do I get tro? Contact the family portion of the Supreme Court in your county Monday through Friday (8:30.m. - 3:30 p.m.m.). On weekends, public holidays and after 15:30.m. From Monday to Friday, you can request a TRO from a municipal court in your area – this is done through your state or local police department. For information on contacting the TRO Court, contact the state or local police department or call the nationwide violence hotline 1-800-572-SAFE (7233). Schedule a hearing within 10 days of the TRO hearing. Both you and your offender will have the opportunity to testify. The judge will examine both evidence before issuing a final restraining order.
